Offering Two Courses!

The Man O’War course occupies the westerly portion of GlenRiddle. The course features pure, windswept links golf. The golfer faces challenges often found in the British Isles including large greens, double fairways, pot bunkers, sand dunes, and the ever-present Eastern Shore winds. The historic racetrack used to train champion thoroughbreds is utilized as a strategic cross hazard on three holes.

War Admiral, is routed through mature forest and offers a completely different golf experience. The course is sheltered from the wind, but provides a demanding test from the tees. The site’s beautiful tidal marsh comes into play on five dramatic holes, offering amazing views. Rugged, breathtaking bunkers reminiscent of golf’s great past is the signature of this course.

Not often is a golf course architect provided a site with so much natural diversity. The goal from the beginning was to create a course that allows Mother nature to show off her beauty.

Lighthouse Sound is a links course featuring a wide variety in terms of visual excitement and strategy. Taking advantage of the expansive views of the bay and Ocean City skyline, this exquisite championship course features marsh, river and bay settings. Ten holes border the pristine marshlands found within the 1,000 acre site while others are framed with mature hardwoods.

Dye have certainly created situations of risk and reward that will quicken the heart rate of even the most experienced golfer. From the back tees this championship quality course is capable of hosting a PGA Tour stop but forgiving enough from the middle tees to satisfy golfers of all skill levels.
